[redacted] and I enjoyed our discussions with you earlier this month and appreciate your interest in our office. I have read the papers you presented (herein returned) and found them very well done -- both innovative and stimulating.

As you can well imagine, we are in the enviable position of having many applicants for our few research openings. At this time, I lean toward someone with several years post-doctoral experience, and with specialization in political economics, for the one opening on my staff. Thus, I must say, with regret, that I see no prospect of a position for you here at this time.

Again, your interest in our program is much appreciated. My personal regards to [redacted]
